

Menota: The runic corpus

The inscriptions in this runic corpus have been encoded according to the Menota Guidelines. They were made on a seminar at the University of Bergen headed by Odd Einar Haugen in the spring term of 2021, in which ten students encoded about ten inscriptions each. The texts are based on the edition Norges innskrifter med de yngre runer (vols. 1–6) as well as the online Runor corpus in Sweden, but they have been augmented by a full morphological annotation of each inscription, and, in many cases, by new drawings. In many cases, the participants have added their own comments, in addition to the ones in Norges innskrifter med de yngre runer.

The runic font being used, UNI Runes, was developed by the seminar leader. This is a Unicode compliant font.

Inscriptions have been displayed on three levels, i.e. with runic characters on the facsimile level, with a transliteration to Latin characters on the diplomatic level, and with standard Old Norse orthography on the normalised level. Presently, the corpus contains 100 inscriptions in the younger futhark from various Norwegian locations.

Please note that this runic corpus is a collaborative student work and not a professional corpus.
