

Menota: The test corpus

The test corpus consists of various Menota-style texts in the process of being officially published in Menota. It gives editors the possibility of seeing what their edition will look like and to adjust it accordingly, and it allows the people running Menota to make suggestions of alternative and perhaps better encoding as well as commenting on manuscript readings. All texts must be valid in order to be displayed in the test archive, but apart from this requirement, they may be a work in progress.

Since texts in the test archive have not been officially published, they are not open for downloading.